

~MOONSHINERS~
Bluegrass and acoustic fun

Bookings:

Jim Burke 795-7235

John Fitt has captivated audiences with his innovative ideas to musical leads. Gifted at both mandolin and guitar, he also has a unique vocal style for bluegrass and folk. John has been a gem hiding under the high grass of the Sonoma County music scene for many years.

Russ Greenspan is a Sonoma County mainstay. Russ anchors the Moonshiners as the stalwart standup bass player. A talented songwriter, Russ can also be seen about town playing guitar, mandolin and dobro. Even though rock and roll is in his soul, he's decided to mellow out and bring his enormous musical experience to play acoustic music with this rabble.

Linda Sullivan... shhhh, don't tell the Maestro, but secretly there is a player sitting in the back of the viola section of the Santa Rosa Symphony that yearns to play fiddle in a bluegrass band. She recently got very lucky and was able to hitch a ride on the coat tails of the Moonshiners and try her lot at this adventure. For those who don't know, the viola is the banjo of the symphony orchestra. The transition to fiddle was a natural segue for Linda.

Jim Burke came late to rehearsal one night, therefore was nominated and elected as leader of the band. It's a good thing, because he plays the dickens out of the mandolin and guitar! He and John have been playing together for a decade and bring remarkable harmonies and unison finger picking to the Moonshiners. Besides sweet bluegrass vocals, Jim has a rich collection of old cowboy songs that occasionally sneak into our sets.
